Cloud-based software

Google Apps provides the ability to create, store, share and work collaboratively on documents, presentations, spreadsheets, drawings and simple databases, (forms) for free. This works ‘in the cloud’ and work can be shared across a variety of devices and operating systems. Students will have access to the latest developed educational apps for free.

Microsoft Office 365 offers a similar service to Google Apps. It will also most likely offer the option of downloading a student version of office for free. If students need to access high end levels of software they will utilise the specialist technology spaces within the school.

Active antivirus software should be installed on devices
